SOUND effects on the radio may be recorded, such as the actual songs of birds or sounds of a farm-yard, or they may be manually produced, as in our cover picture for this week. In the latter case, the ingenuity of CBC sound effects operators seems endless, and the materials they use equally so—as in the picture, where a frying pan and a coffee percolator, two whistles and some quite ordinary looking carpentry tools are being pressed into service. The sound effects operator at CBC Winnipeg is John Mestery.

The Ways of Mankind

SOME of the best radio programming on this side of the Atlantic has been produced in the studios of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation. The point was proved afresh at 1:00 o'clock yesterday afternoon with the debut over WNYC of a new series called "The Ways of Mankind," which could very easily take the season's honours in sound broadcasting.

The opening program of the series, called "A Word in Your Ear," was a study of the function of language, which on paper may look like a rather forbidding invitation to lively listening.

But as written by Lister Sinclair and produced by Andrew Allan, two stalwarts of the CBC in Toronto, the presentation was as witty and urbane a show as has come on the radio airways in many a day. What's more, it was informative and educational. A little more radio like this and it will be television's turn to start worrying.

"The Ways of Mankind" is the latest of the recorded programs offered by the National Association of Educational Broadcasters under a grant from the Fund for Adult Education, an organization established by the Ford Foundation.

A listener should not be dismayed, however, by these awesome-sounding sponsoring auspices. Mr. Allan and his colleagues are not ones to be overwhelmed by the word "education." They believe in bringing the real professional know-how of entertainment to their task and yesterday they did this superbly.

In his script, Mr. Sinclair was concerned with the uses of language and right at the outset he took up the expression of feelings. There was, he said, the howl of the (Please turn to page 2)

Stage 53. A Sense of Sin, an original drama by Andrew Allan, produced by Andrew Allan. From Toronto. "It had its beginning," says the author "in a play called Narrow Passage which I wrote for the New Play Society in Toronto in 1949. It was performed in 1950, but I was never completely satisfied with the way I had treated it. I felt I should have featured an aspect of the plot or mood that had been given secondary importance, so not long ago I rewrote it for the Stage series under a new title." The story is of a girl in a small town who wants to get out of it, but can't. She doesn't realize that the smallness is in her, not the town.

four-legged wolf. There was also, he noted, the meaningful whistle of the two-legged wolf. The two wolves were not thinking of the same thing.

Language also is the function of an occasion. Mr. Sinclair illustrated the point with a hilarious recourse to the ridiculous. He envisioned a politician proposing marriage and employing all the clichés associated with a stump speech during a campaign. . . .

In the course of the program, note was taken of how peoples in different corners of the world may have either a great many words meaning much the same thing or may say a lot with a very few words. One illustration was the over-abbreviated newspaper headline of today, which Mr. Sinclair summarized as "the compressed wreckage of a phrase."

"A Word in Your Ear" had its serious moments; an illuminating study of how the Lord's Prayer was spoken at varying periods in history and an insight into the language of the Navajo Indians. Cumulatively, the whole program brilliantly made its point: that people must try to understand one another's languages if they are to live together peaceably. To misunderstand each other is only too easy.

Mr. Allan's production, magnificently attuned to the ear, was genuine radio, now practically a lost art. His use of sound effects and music were creative in their own right but, even more important, always disciplined.

CBC French Network

On the western section of the CBC French network this week, the Sunday to Friday recorded program of "Musical Masterpieces" includes, on Sunday, Gluck's Don Juan Ballet; on Monday a Grieg program, the Peer Gynt Suite and Danse Symphonique; on Tuesday, The Good-Humoured Ladies (Scarlatti-Thomasini); on Wednesday, a violin concerto by Khatchaturian; on Thursday, three instrumental pieces by Debussy; and on Friday, a Beethoven program including the Leonora Overture No. 1 and Symphony No. 2. The Thursday recital is by Violette Delisle-Couture, soprano, and Guy Bourassa, pianist.

Ruth Harding. Ruth Harding of Toronto has been appointed CBC Consultant on consumer buying, to replace Allison Grant, who has gone to Washington to live, but who still reports on consumer problems from Washington to Trans-Canada Matinee. Miss Harding, who will be heard Monday to Friday beginning today, was born in Paris, Ontario, and grew up in Alberta and taught school at Crows' Nest Pass. She studied home economics at MacDonald Institute, Guelph, and later took special courses in textiles at Oregon State College and Colorado State College, and took a degree course in nutrition and child care and development at the University of Washington. Later she taught home economics at Edmonton Technical High School. Before coming to the CBC she was chief nutritionist with the Toronto Department of Health, and has been chairman of the Toronto Nutrition Committee since its inception in 1949. During the Second Great War she served with the WRENS as quarters officer, and later as officer in charge of the School for Ship's Cooks in Halifax. From Toronto.

Manitoba's Hutterites

Kay O'Neill Describes Visits To Elm River Colony In CBC Morning Commentary

Late in November Kay O'Neill, morning commentator at CBC, Winnipeg, paid a visit to the Hutterite Colony at Elm River, Manitoba, accompanied by Andrew Thompson, regional liaison officer of the Citizenship Branch of the Department of Immigration, and George Williams, teacher of the Elm River School, which meets daily in the Colony meeting house. Miss O'Neill's morning broadcasts on December 2, 4 and 9 dealt with these visits.

Kay O'Neill

"I went with some trepidation," Miss O'Neill said, "because I had heard that the Hutterites looked with rather stern disapproval on some things which we take for granted—such as radio, television, photographs, and so on. But at the Colony itself I soon forgot all those things in the warmth of the welcome I received."

In her broadcast of December 2, Miss O'Neill told a little about the Hutterites themselves.

"We have all seen them on the streets here in Winnipeg," she said, "or in other prairie cities. The men are bearded, and they wear plain black suits with black hats. The women usually have a handkerchief tied over their heads, and wear high, demure collars, aprons, and long sweeping skirts.

"They are members of a religious sect dating back to the 16th century. The founder of the group was Jacob Hutter. This was in Germany. The Hutterite sect was formed at about the same time as the Mennonites. The main difference at that time—the reason they are separate sects now—is that the Hutterites believe in community living and the Mennonites don't. That's why the Hutterites live in colonies of about one hundred people.

"... I heard that Hutterites don't believe in civil government—maybe you've heard that, too. But I've learned that it isn't true. They do believe in civil government, and they must bow to the dictates of even a tyrannical government except where it conflicts with their religious beliefs. Then they must obey the laws of their church.

"One of their laws forbids the use of firearms or weapons and forbids taking life. That also forbids military service. So in one country after another they were forced to leave. The Hutterites believe you should never oppose evil with force, and to them being forced to serve in an army would be evil. So when any government they have lived under demands military service, they leave. It is a sin to resist oppression, but they can leave—and through history that's what they have done. The Hutterite colonies moved across Europe—Germany, Holland, Russia—and finally came to the United States, some in Pennsylvania, and a good many in the Dakotas. In the first quarter of this century, the colonies began spreading across the border into Canada. There are about 20 Hutterite colonies in Manitoba. Most of the Hutterite colonies in the world are now in North America."

At the Elm River Colony—which she found in the process of splitting up, as it had grown too large and a new colony was to be formed near Morris, Manitoba—Miss O'Neill spent a good deal of time at the meeting house school. On one occasion Sunday School was going on.

"When I went in . . . the children were all sitting quietly with their heads bent, their hands clasped in their laps . . . The little girls had black bonnets, the older ones polka-dotted handkerchiefs tied under their chins. In both cases, the hair was parted neatly in the middle and tucked under at the hair-line. Dresses were all alike—high round collars, long sleeves, aprons and long skirts . . . Hutterites believe in communal living. They buy whole bolts of material out of Colony funds—individual members don't have any money of their own—and the material is distributed according to who needs a new dress . . . The boys, on the other side of the room, were all dressed in sober black, square cut coats of light weight wool fastened down the front with dome fasteners—but some of the boys in the front row, I noticed, had plaid shirts under the coats fastened with buttons."

Soon after her first broadcast, Miss O'Neill began to get letters from the Hutterite children — all solemnly headed up "Elm River Colony, Newton Siding, Manitoba." They were friendly letters:

From Solomon Waldner: "I did appreciate very much being able to listen to your broadcast about us. We were all standing around the car . . . And we were surprised when you said we were very quiet in Sunday School"

BBC Presents. The second program in the BBC-Transcribed series Crime Is Our Business describes a nylon robbery in the great English manufacturing city of Leeds, and it shows what a poor chance the habitual criminal has of keeping out of jail when he takes his chance against all the resources of a modern police force. In this case, the thieves were finally arrested after a country-wide chase by radio-controlled patrol cars, but it was the work of scientists in the police laboratories that put the final touches to the evidence that sent the crooks back to jail. The program closes with a personal message by the Chief Constable of Leeds. The story of larceny in Leeds is based on fact, although some of the names of people and places have been changed.

... I hope you can visit us again soon."

From Susie Hofer: "I wonder if you liked your dinner on Sunday afternoon. I was so very sorry you came a little lately. You told all about the knives, spoons and forks. I did not suppose you would tell everything you know about the Colony."

From Eddie Maendel: "We were all listening at our teacher's radio. He came in the morning. We told him to drive over where it was no wind between the icehouse and the kitchen ... All the Colony came together to hear you speak over our teacher's car ... First of all we heard a church meeting. When it was over, everything was quiet. After about one-half minute, then we heard you say, Good morning, this is Kay O'Neill ... The grown-ups and the girls were all standing outside, and the car was plugged full with six men ... I think you must have been very interesting to walk around and see the farm in the cold wind with your nylon stockings and high-heeled shoes."

From Jonathan Maendel: "When we had finished singing, Andy Thompson stood up and spoke about who are singing ... and he told a very good speech."

From Joe Waldner: "We appreciate it very much that you came to visit us. We would be glad if the people would come to the Colony about twice a month. We would like that very much ... I have heard you talk on the radio. You talked about fish at Lake Manitoba ... I have never heard that fish can drown."

From Paul Maendel: "We are writing letters in our classroom ... I am in Grade V. My name is Paul and my second name is Maendel and my father's name is Paul Maendel too and my mother's name is Mary Maendel. We have a little baby. Her name is Susie Maendel. We have three girls new."

From David Waldner: "I was surprised to see you come in at the door ... I appreciate it very much to hear Mr. Thompson speak to us ... We like visitors to come down on Sunday, for we have not got enough time on other days for visitors to bother us, for have too much work. We are moving to Oak Bluff Colony in another few weeks. They pulled lots of half the people to go to Morris ... I hope you will write as soon as I hope you will."

From Dorothy Mandel: "We looked at you when you walked up the floor with your high heels. Maybe they were four inches long. I could not walk if I would have such heels. Well, anyway, I like you. You had a very nice dress ... You can talk very good, you are a good talker ... You knew more than I knew when you was talking about cross stitch and other things. I can make some cross stitches too, and colour them very nice ... I am in Grade VI, old 12 years, born year 1940 Nov. 6."

Before she left Elm River, Miss O'Neill had a glimpse of the dramatic preliminaries to the breaking up of the Colony—the division in two parts, and the departure of a considerable number of the members to the new Oak Bluff Colony at Morris.

"When we left, the dark-suited figures with round black hats and beards were hurrying through the semi-darkness toward the brightly-lighted door of the meeting house. The meeting was only for the heads of families in the Colony ... The boss would be the master of ceremonies. Those dark-suited bearded men would draw slips from a hat to decide who would move and who would stay.

There is no choice about it, but families are not separated. For instance, a father and his two married sons might decide to draw as one unit—either they would all stay or all go to the new Colony ... The wives and children would be waiting at home ... As we drove away, I suppose there was an anxious family group waiting around each of the wood stoves in the big main bedroom downstairs ... waiting for the head of the house to come and tell them where they would live for the next twenty years."

W-3:45 p.m. K-3:00 p.m. X-3:00 p.m.

Meet the Commission. A panel discussion on the Royal Commission on Agriculture and Rural Life in Saskatchewan. Bob Knowles, producer. From Saskatoon.

Mrs. C. A. MacGregor of the editorial staff of the Western Producer, and Olaf Turnbull, a farmer from Kindersley, will meet the Commission panel composed of W. B. Baker, Commission chairman; Mrs. Nancy Adams, Commissioner from Ethelton; and Harry Fowler, Commissioner from Saskatoon.

Tonight's discussion, the second such broadcast since the Commission began its inquiries, will be a progress report to bring Saskatchewan listeners up to date on some of the initial findings.

K-7:00 p.m.

CBC Wednesday Night

French Canadian Music. CBC Orchestra conducted by Alexander Brott. From Montreal.

Symphonic Variations (Clermont Pepin); Symphony in G, first movement (Couture); Delightful Delusions Overture (Brott); Kaleidoscope (Pierre Mercure).

W-7:15 p.m. K-9:15 p.m. X-9:15 p.m.

Foreign Policy. "Canada has lived her life under the shadow of two great nations, from which she has drawn the sources of her life. These two great world powers, Great Britain and the United States, have in general been amicable but not uniformly so. Great Britain has been at times indifferent, at times impatient, and sometimes arbitrary. The United States until recent years has been jealous, provocative, aggressive and often frankly hostile. Neither of these two powers could have been resisted by force of arms, nor deflected by diplomacy. Yet Canada has managed to find her own life, and sometimes even to get her own way." These words of Canadian historian Arthur Lower of Queen's University introduce tonight's 45-minute documentary dealing with Canadian foreign policy. The CBC's Eugene Hallman, whose script was documented by Professor Lower, describes the broadcast as "an examination of the factors which motivate Canada's actions in her external affairs."

W-8:15 p.m. K-10:15 p.m. X-10:15 p.m.

Hamlet (French Version)

Hamlet. A performance of excerpts from Shakespeare's celebrated tragedy in a French translation by Andre Gide; from Toronto. The Parisian company of Jean-Louis Barrault and Madeleine Renaud, which has been touring Canada and the United States since last October, will be heard in this performance, which follows their broadcast of the same work on the CBC French Network on December 28. Their stage appearances in Montreal and New York will precede the broadcast, and each excerpt will also be introduced in English. The French language portions are from transcriptions made by the company in Montreal. Gide's translation has been heatedly discussed on this continent. The writer himself said in his preface, concerning Hamlet: "No writing could be more subtle, more crafty and ambiguous, full of traps and pitfalls. All of Shakespeare's other plays are crystal clear by comparison. There is something of a challenge or a wager in the use of such an incredibly devious style to express even the most simple of thoughts and feelings." Barrault's interpretation of the Gide translation has been called "leger" by some critics—a French Hamlet in whom the torture of doubt is underplayed and in whom the reason for his indecision to take action is somewhat obscure. Some of the same critics have said, however, that Barrault's Hamlet is still the intelligent but wavering prince who reaches out for all kinds of pretexts for putting off the hour of revenge, and who is the victim of his nervousness rather than of his conscience.

W-9:30 p.m. K-8:30 p.m. X-8:30 p.m.

Recital. Ernesto Vinci, baritone, with a string quartet, will be heard from Toronto.

W-10:15 p.m. K-11:15 p.m. X-11:15 p.m.

Right Listening

Radio is considered to be one of the great new media of education. If the radio is to have this effect we must use it selectively. There are many kinds of fare on the air waves. Information, opinion, discussion, music of all kinds, plays of all kinds, variety programs, gossip programs, neighbourly news, etc. etc.—and we select according to our taste. There is one fundamental rule about the radio—we must learn to turn the radio on and learn to turn it off. Otherwise we fall into the habit of listening without discrimination. To get any benefit we need to listen to certain programs for specific reasons which we can give if asked. There are two publications that will help encourage this kind of listening . . . For help in using your radio, write for Radio Listening Guide, Saskatchewan Arts Board, 1100 Broad St., Regina; also CBC Times, CBC Winnipeg, $1.00 per year.—Saskatchewan Community.

Manitoba University. The second of a series of talks entitled The University Speaks Out, by members of the staff of the University of Manitoba. The purpose of the series is to show that a prairie university is interested in things that affect everyone's life, and that it is also a leader in the more abstract sciences. The sub-title of tonight's talk is Atoms Without War? John Rollitt, Director of the School of Commerce, interviews R. W. Pringle, professor of Physics and an authority on nuclear physics, on the peace time uses of atomic energy. The discussion will centre around the economic uses of atomic energy. David Walker, producer. From Winnipeg.

W-7:00 p.m.

Citizens' Forum. The question of whether the interests of labour and management are fundamentally the same will be considered at a meeting arranged by the Commerce Club of Queen's University, Kingston, Ontario. Professor F. A. Knox, head of the department of political economy at the University, will be chairman.

W-9:30 p.m. K-9:00 p.m. X-9:00 p.m.

Culture and Liberty

By GEORGES-HENRI LEVESQUE

(Most Rev. Georges-Henri Levesque is the Dean of Social Science at Laval University, Quebec, and was a member of the Massey Commission. This talk was broadcast October 26.)

... It is not only lack of support for culture that concerns me. There is also the stifling pressure of mass opinion, so difficult to escape nowadays even in a free country, because of the very efficiency of modern communications. Standardized opinion is really no opinion. It is a kind of ready-made state of mental inactivity that resents and resists all the motions of original thought. It attaches itself to words, such as freedom, and would protect the word by forgetting its meaning. This ... belongs to the problem of culture and liberty.

In its fullest sense, human culture means the progressive development of the complete individual: the improvement of all his faculties, intellectual and aesthetic, moral and physical. But most people use this word "culture" only in its artistic and intellectual connection, and so I will deal with it in this narrower sense.

Liberty of culture can be defined in a negative way, first of all, as the absence of restraint or fear. Science and art can tell the truth only in an atmosphere of sympathy. They are the flowers of the mind that can only grow in the sunlight of liberty. If scientists are not allowed full academic freedom to carry on their slow but fruitful research, if they are not permitted freely to extend the field of human knowledge, and apply their discoveries to the improvement of man's condition, science is made sterile, and a great source of human progress is cut off. This applies to the social as much as to the physical sciences.

Again, if writers are not allowed to express their ideas sincerely as their minds have conceived them, the possibility of dialogue between men is suppressed, and the mind is imprisoned within a narrow conformity, or perhaps it is put to the baser purposes of propaganda. Finally, if our artists, those privileged children of the Creator, are not left free to obey the intuitions of their creative imagination, civilization will be starved as a result—starved for the lack of all those masterpieces whose unrealized forms struggle to be released from the artist's mind so that they may speak to the world.

In a word, if the mind is restrained, if it is deprived of that liberty which is the air it breathes, culture is suffocated and civilization is degraded. But even sacred liberty is not enough to assure the development of culture. More is needed. Culture requires that other kind of liberty which is called material security. Man's mind lives in a body that is burdened by all the necessities of matter. Even scientists, teachers and artists have to eat. Even actors and writers have to wear clothes, have to live somewhere, have to educate their children. Canadians are rightly proud of their material prosperity, but do they pay enough attention to the growth of a corresponding wealth of the spirit? The material needs of those who produce that kind of wealth must be satisfied if we really want progress in our culture. The all-too-current theory that the inspiration of the artist thrives on

Trans-Canada Matinee.

Today: What's New in Customer Service—Helen Allen; Deeds That Live, Margaret McWilliams—Kay Russenholt, Winnipeg; Shetland Pony Club for Edmonton—Betty Tomlinson, Edmonton; News Commentary—Constance Garneau, Montreal; Piano Duo—Edmund Assaly and Thelma Johannes, Montreal.

This afternoon Kay Russenholt will talk about Margaret McWilliams, the late wife of the Lieutenant-Governor of Manitoba, who was widely known as a lecturer on public affairs, community leader, writer and research historian.

W-3:45 p.m. K-3:00 p.m. X-3:00 p.m.

Theatre Hour. Claudia, by Rose Franken, adapted for radio by Stanley Mann. From Toronto. In the space of 24 hours Claudia passes three important milestones. First, she tries to arouse jealousy in her husband. Second, she discovers that she is going to have a child, and hard on the heels of this revelation she finds out that her mother has a very short time to live. The play's story deals with Claudia encountering life, and her acquiescence to the demands that living makes on her. The final curtain finds her still the engaging young woman she was when the play opened, but she has learned to "hold close with open hands," and in so doing she has achieved a spiritual stature that promises a rich and happy fulfilment of her marriage.

Dom. 7:00 p.m. MST

Speakers' Choice. First of four talks by Arthur L. Phelps, professor of English at McGill University. From Montreal. Professor Phelps will cover a variety of topics, the first, tonight, on "what to do with the shrunken freshman." He will speak next week on an old mill at Chaffey's Locks, Ontario, which he owns and in which he spends the summer months, and on the day-book of an old country store which he found there. According to the day-book, he says, there were "23 teams at the mill on a Saturday morning waiting for grist."

W-10:00 p.m. K-10:45 p.m. X-10:45 p.m.

Passport to Utopia. West-coast writer George Woodcock has written a series of six semi-documentary programs exploring the idea of Utopias from the Greeks' conception of a perfect world down to George Orwell's 1984. Production will be by Robert Harlow in the CBC Vancouver studios. A narrator and a number of voices will read passages from the writings of Plato, Sir Thomas More and others. The programs will show how the idea of a Utopia originated, developed and reflected itself in the various societies where it was written about.

W-10:15 p.m.
Sunday, Jan. 18, X-10:15 a.m.
Wednesday, Jan. 21, K-6:45 p.m.

"Vancouver Drama"

Vancouver Drama. Some people are crazy about fishing; others have no interest in it at all. But what happens when two pals, with opposing points of view, go out on a fishing trip? Allan Sangster's play, Fishing Phooey, deals with just such a situation. No doubt some in the listening audience will share the enthusiasm of one for casting flies and eating juicy trout; and others will share the misery of the second pal when he is awakened at four in the morning to struggle into a cold unfriendly dawn, falls in the mud, gets soaking wet, and finally winds up with no fish at all. Leading roles will be taken by Bruno Gerussi and Doug Haskins. From Vancouver.

W-10:30 p.m. K-9:30 p.m. X-9:30 p.m.

CULTURE AND LIBERTY

misery is an invention of bourgeois egoists, and is not supported by the facts. It may have happened from time to time that a certain talent has nourished itself on suffering; but how many more have been poisoned by it!

Security and material welfare, then, are just as important to the intellectual worker as to anyone else in society. And yet our writers, our scientists, our teachers, our artists, can hardly be said to earn so much money for their efforts that anyone would be envious of them. If we want modern civilization to become more humanized, we must pay our writers so that they will have the courage to devote their lives to writing and publishing; we must pay our artists so that they will have time to dream—and how often the importance of the dreamer is forgotten!

Spiritual liberty first and material independence second—these are the two main requirements for the existence of culture. It is no use to proclaim an ideal if we do nothing to realize it. If we want liberty of culture, we have to cultivate liberty. The too-exclusive and even idolatrous worship of authority which is sometimes seen in our country brings the risk of weakening our sense of liberty. Authority comes from God, we are told repeatedly. But liberty also comes from God. And it comes even before authority in the scale of human values. It is one of the essential characteristics of human beings created in the image of God. It is liberty which sets man apart from the other creatures and forms the basis of his responsibility. Liberty gives him his value. It makes him an individual. Authority, however, necessary it may be, is a social factor, and comes only after liberty. Authority merely exists to protect and bring into harmony the freedom of individuals by directing them toward the common good. Liberty can be abused, but so can authority. Just as license is a perversion of liberty, so authoritarianism is a corruption of authority.

Culture, in any case, can certainly not live in an atmosphere of restraint and fear. Nor can it live in an atmosphere of indifference. We want it to be a living reality in Canada. We want it to flourish. We want it to bear witness to all the values of the spirit. If we really want these things, let us do our best—even if this should call for courage and a little effort—to understand, first of all, then to love, and finally to win for ourselves and hold forever this liberty, of which any culture is the finest fruit. We will only be able to produce a culture on that day when we accept its essential condition: liberty.

Contemporary Art.—By and large what our contemporary artists are doing is of positive value: They are seeking and finding new meanings and orders, new evidences of a super-reality that can, if comprehended, give quiet and security in our times of apparent chaos and universal anarchy.—William McCloy, on CBC.

Paul Endersby

Roving Dancer

Paul Enderby's Dancing Feet Took Him To 17 Countries

Paul Endersby, who has been heard on the Stage series, Summerfallow, Cross Section and Dominion Magazine, as well as on TV in Toronto, began his stage career as a dancer, after "being shown a few steps by Vernon Castle" in an airforce hangar in Texas. Later, in England, he and his partner Babette learned £500 a week between them, and in Paris he danced with the Dolly Sisters at the time when the Charleston was all the rage. Meantime, he was doing some acting in Hastings Turner's play Lilies of the Field in London and on tour. His dancing feet took him to 17 countries in a few years, and during one interval he managed the casino at Monte Carlo. He won the World Ballroom championship in 1926 and the International Championship in the following year. Later, with an amateur partner, the Countess of Pourtales, he won the International Mixed Championship for amateurs and professionals. In the late 1930's he married Dr. Jeanne Miquel, first Frenchwoman to become a veterinary surgeon. They have five sons.

Endersby was in the R.A.F. during the war, as group controller of fighters. For the CBC, he has written the Sleepy Hollow Farm series for young listeners, and has played in many series including Way of the Spirit and Canadian Panorama. He was born on a farm near Whitby, Ontario.

Quebec.—Even the English-speaking people who live in splendid array on the big Rock have also the grace and the pace of old Quebec. This city has a culture and a personality all her own. So many of them, French and English speaking—Canadian and Canadian—regard the bigger cities like Montreal and Toronto with a careful eye. The brashness, the showiness, the passion for tearing down and building in straight lines, has little place here. —John Fisher, on CBC.
